THE PERSUASION OF ANDERSON.

(From the Boston Traveler.)

In New Orleans, yesterday, Judge Whitaker, having no fear of and no respect for pledges, understandings, compact, compromises or bargains, but being impressed with the policy of driving out every influential Republican in public life, ordered General Thomas C. Anderson up for violence upon the finding of the packed jury of his constituents. In response to the next question, he had only thing to say why violence should not be passed upon him, General Anderson said:

Sir—You are about to set upon the finding of twelve persons. I am in your power. You know I am innocent of the charge. But I am a poor man, and I am in the hands of a law. I am ready to receive your sentence.

Every word of that, doubtless, is true. But the rebels may, nevertheless, make use of Boss Tweed's memorable saying: "What are you going to do about it?" Indeed, what can any person believe to the rebel usurpation in the South do about the system of prosecution that is practiced everywhere to drive him from his home and to subject him to disgrace? What can he do, save accompanying the news of this sentence, comes the information from Washington that the President will be in Louisiana in contemplation of this fact that it is now too late to do anything in behalf of the man who was instrumental in electing the President, and has been since stuck down for that very act.

The Traveler has fully explained this case before, so that we need not enlarge upon it. But the main point should be kept in mind clearly. This President's trip to office is involved in the fate of the members of the Louisiana Boarding Board. General Anderson is either the victim of a foul conspiracy, or he is guilty of something to offend a President who was not elected if he was conspired against. It was the President's duty to protect him by procuring a Louisiana jury should have a Republican form of government instead of an irrepressible corruption. If he was conspired upon upon election of fraud, the whole action of the Louisiana Boarding Board, nullified, and Mr. Hayes is not President. It will not do to say that this policy is an accomplished fact, and we cannot go back of it. That is not so. It is admitted by the very man who acted as judge of Governor Hayes in Louisiana, that the President's government was the legally elected one, and that the Government was installed upon a plot of foul behavior. In fact, a sort of revolutionary experiment. They admit that it was a compromise based upon a wrong. The President's Government, therefore, has no legal existence. It is a patchwork of violence and corruption. Will the National Government stand upon its technical right alone, while the usurper Government of Louisiana conspires to the Presidential election rights. This is not a mere temporary question. It is a question of principle, and the country is curious to know what answer will be made to it.

According to the London Morning Post, General Ignatieff took to Bucharest an autograph letter from the Emperor of Russia to the Prince of Roumania. This letter informed the Prince that General Ignatieff was charged to make important communications. A demand for the release of the Roumanian was accordingly made. The Roumanian Government, therefore, has no legal existence. It is a patchwork of violence and corruption. Will the National Government stand upon its technical right alone, while the usurper Government of Louisiana conspires to the Presidential election rights. This is not a mere temporary question. It is a question of principle, and the country is curious to know what answer will be made to it.

Lord Derby's speech, that since the Government determined that the question respecting the passage of money through the House of Commons should be left to the decision of Europe, there does not remain the shadow of a plea for a separate war by England or separate operations in the Balkan peninsula.

The London Times says that all the allies in Bulgaria are being killed by Russian or Bulgarian soldiers. The formation of seventy battalions and twelve squadrons of Bulgarian militia has just been ordered and the officers will be Russian.

Some of the adjustment of the League of Nations. Mr. Burleigh, Senator from Connecticut, has been paying a visit to his country. Mr. Madison, who contested the seat given to Mr. Burleigh, has returned to his home in New Castle.

Rain, the well known actress, has gone into voluntary bankruptcy under her real name, Rose T. Lyon, under a register in bankruptcy. A warrant for her apprehension has been issued.

The March-April number of the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW is issued and contains the following articles: The Army of the United States, by General James A. Garfield; England and America, by Charles W. Eliot; The President of Harvard University, by George W. Johnson; The Jews in America, by Robert G. Ingersoll; The Alliance of the South and the West, by Senator John T. Morgan; Contemporary Literature, and a symposium on the Doctrine of Eternal Punishment, by Rev. Noah Porter, D. D., LL. D., President of Yale College; Rev. O. B. Frothingham, Very Rev. Thomas S. Preson, V. G., Rev. Henry B. Bellows, D. D., Rev. Wm. H. Williams, D. D., and Rev. Thomas J. Sawyer, D. D., published at 30 Broadway, New York, and for sale by booksellers and newsdealers generally.

The late Pope left two wills. In the first, drawn up in his quality of Pontiff, he leaves an annual sum of 3,000,000 francs to his successor for the expenses of the Holy See, and an annual allowance for the employees of the former Pontifical Administration. In the second will the testator, speaking as a private person, makes his nephews his heirs, and leaves 300,000 francs to be distributed among the poor of Rome. At the death of his successor in the Papacy, the testator orders that his own remains shall be entombed in the Basilica of St. Lawrence outside the walls. He has also left a very simple and pious testament, the cost of which is not to exceed 2000 francs.

The nomination of Mr. Beard as Collector of the port of Boston by the President seems to have been simply because he was the choice of the Senators from Massachusetts. The Journal's special says: "The two Senators would not express their opinions until they were requested to do so by the President; and they then united in recommending Mr. Beard. This recommendation decided the case." And yet there is said to be a "civil service," the stern rules of which are not to be varied by "recommendation."

The Cincinnati Enquirer denies that Senator Thurman was drunk. "He had been looking at the gas light until he had to sit down and rest. He was dizzy."

Cardinal McCloskey, in presenting his homage to Pope Leo XIII., said he had no reason to deplore the lateness of his arrival in Rome as the conclave had made so excellent a choice.

THE GREENBACK PLATFORM.

The Boston Advertiser closes up a reference to the action, and purpose of the "Convention of greenbackers," strikers and communists which met at Toledo on the 24th to organize a "national party," with this clear and candid statement of the real object of the leaders and the teachings they set forth:

The platform, which is approved by the leading Democratic journal, of Ohio, and only objected to as calculated to divide those who are already united in opinion, and, therefore, should be in no doubt, declaring that it is one of the exclusive functions of government to "create money" that all paper currency should be issued by the government; that Congress should provide money adequate to the full employment of labor, the equitable distribution of its products and the requirements of "business," and "regulate its value so that the rate of interest will secure to the laborer his just reward"; that government bonds should be "taxed precisely like 'other property,'" and a graduated tax should be laid on incomes; that legislation should regulate the hours of labor so that the working classes may have "more leisure for mental improvement and social enjoyment"; and declares that the adoption of an American monetary system, such as is here proposed, will harmonize all existing differences in regard to the tariff and federal taxation, distribute equitably the joint earnings of labor and capital, give employment to all who are now idle, and enable every man and woman, by their own efforts, to secure "competence," so that overgrown fortunes and extreme poverty will seldom be "found within the limits of our republic."

Alas! as the propositions seem to persons who have made some study of the laws of finance and the proper limits of legislation, they are inadvisable and dangerous. Plainly presented by some long-tongued demagogue, the doctrine of fairly intelligent men who will be accepted by them. There are a great number of the ignorant and the dishonest who will readily accept them. They teach that the present depression in business and the loss of employment by the numbers of working men is the consequence of legislation hostile to the laboring classes and the poor, and that good times can be restored and everybody made rich and happy by acts of Congress. They teach that property is to be restored, not by honest labor and economy, but by legislation. They teach the workingman to believe that there is a conspiracy against the wealthy classes to rob him of the fruits of his labor, and that it is the fault of the Government that he is not made a millionaire. They teach him to expect by political action to bring about a state of things which will enable him with a little more and more to become a millionaire, and that the only way to secure this is by the use of force, and that the only way to secure this is by the use of force.

Every word of that, doubtless, is true. But the rebels may, nevertheless, make use of Boss Tweed's memorable saying: "What are you going to do about it?" Indeed, what can any person believe to the rebel usurpation in the South do about the system of prosecution that is practiced everywhere to drive him from his home and to subject him to disgrace?
